

As an avid fan of the XM satellite radio system, something that far better serves the public airwaves than conventional radio, I think any banning of traffic and weather information from XM Radio is doing me and other listeners a disservice and is forcing us to use other lesser quality ways of getting that information. Conventional radio traffic and weather information is not adequate in it's current form and XM does a much better job. Maybe if conventional broadcast traffic and weather stations did a better job, we wouldn't need XM satellite radio information!
